

Speech: "Love Your Neighbor"

Introduction

Hook/Attention Getter: How would the world look if everyone treated others not just fairly, but with genuine love and compassion? Most of us know the saying, "Treat people how you want to be treated," but what if we went even further?

Thesis/Topic: As my faith began to grow and I learned more about Jesus, I started to understand a deeper calling; not just to treat others well, but to truly love my neighbors.

Preview of Main Points/Ideas: This means choosing kindness even when it's hard, showing compassion instead of judgment, and living out love in everyday actions.

Body:

Main Point #1: First, the Golden Rule teaches fairness, but loving your neighbor calls for selfless love that goes beyond what we receive in return.

Supporting Evidence:

Personal Story: My journey of learning more about Jesus and growing in faith

- At first, I focused on being nice only to people who were nice to me

- I realized it was easy to treat friends well but harder with people I didn't get along with

- Through prayer and learning about my faith, I began to see that love isn't conditional

- I started trying to respond with patience, forgiveness, and understanding

Main Point #2: Second, loving your neighbor changes how you see people; you begin to see their struggles, not just their actions.

Supporting Evidence:

- Showing empathy instead of assuming the worst

- Offering help, encouragement, or simply kindness

-Understanding that everyone is going through something you may not see

Realizing that love can make a powerful difference in someone's day or life

Main Point #3: Loving your neighbor also brings inner peace and strengthens your own character.

Supporting Evidence:

-Acting from love reduces anger and resentment

-It helps build stronger relationships

-It reflects the values of your faith in everyday life

Conclusion:

Recap of Thesis/Topic: So while the Golden Rule teaches us to treat others as we want to be treated, my faith journey has shown me the power of going further, choosing to truly love my neighbor.

Recap Main Points/Ideas: Loving others means showing kindness even when it's difficult, practicing empathy, and choosing compassion over judgment.

Closing Statement: If we all made the choice to love our neighbors a little more each day, we could change not only other people's lives, but our own as well.
